BUCKING AGAINST EDMUNDS.

Colonel George W. Hooker, ex-sergeant-at-arms of the House of Representatives, treats with ridicule the idea that there is any serious opposition to Senator Edmunds' re-election. But very few people can be more than printed talk. Vermont or any other State in the Union would find it hard to discover a man who could fill all of Senator Edmunds' chair. Colonel Hooker, we take it, expresses the opinion of the great majority of Vermont Republicans when he says that should he be elected to the Legislature as an anti-Edmunds man, he would still have to vote for that gentleman's return to the United States Senate, of which body he has for so many years been the monitor. Judge Poland has come out for Edmunds, but were he on the other side, he could not, says Colonel Hooker, muster three votes. And still there is no doubt of a sore feeling against Edmunds. People in Washington who watch public men closely could tell last winter that Mr. Edmunds' course of silent opposition to Mr. Blair had ruffled the feelings of Republicans in Vermont as well as elsewhere. This was shown in the relations between Mr. Edmunds and Representative Stewart. The latter is spoken of as the strongest possible candidate who may be put up against Mr. Edmunds.

Mr. Stewart served for the first time in Congress during the last session. He and Mr. Edmunds had been great friends. Mr. Edmunds practically took Mr. Stewart under his wing. Their two families lived in the same house. It was owing to Mr. Edmunds' influence that Mr. Stewart was placed at the head of the Republican members of the Committee on Expenditures in the Department of Justice, which committee investigated the Star-Route matters.

The fine hand of Mr. Edmunds could be seen shaping the course of the Republican members of that committee. But things changed as the campaign went on. Mr. Edmunds was in his tent. Mr. Stewart was told by the Vermont Republicans that there was a great and growing feeling against the Senator. Mr. Edmunds and Mr. Stewart dropped apart. During the last winter they did not live together. They were not on relations. All of these things tended to throw Mr. Stewart against Mr. Edmunds. He was also told by his friends that he might be Senator if he desired the honor. The few found lodgment in his bosom. This is the history of the so-called opposition to Mr. Edmunds' re-election.

BLAIR-CHANDLER.

The New Hampshire Legislature will today decide whether the Senatorial caucus shall be held to-morrow or Monday. Mr. Blair and Mr. Chandler continue to be the only candidates spoken of. There is no hint of a dark horse. Should it be decided to hold the caucus to-morrow it will be a Blair victory, as Brother Blair is working to that end, while Mr. Chandler does not want the fight to commence until next Monday.

At present it looks as if Mr. Blair would be his own successor, though he is roundly rebuffed by the opposition. Mr. Chandler's friends talk of Blair as a paid attorney of Gould and Huntington, denounce him as being dishonestly connected with the Shipper Peruvian business, and as having sold out his friends in various fraudulent mining and patent schemes. Mr. Blair's supporters work the labor and temperance record of their candidate for all that it can bring, and defy their opponents to produce any proofs of their charges. These proofs were promised, but not having come forth there is more or less dissatisfaction on the Chandler side. Mr. Blair claims that he will be nominated on the first or second ballot. Mr. Chandler talks of a bolt, but seems to find difficulty in securing a man to lead it.

The Manchester Union's Concord correspondent says: "Blair unmistakably has the best of it as sentiment now stands. The shadow of a Democratic National Administration hangs over the conflict darker than one would suppose. Hunting a Senatorship for glory is a different matter than hunting it for patronage. Enthusiasm like that of the Bingham witness, doesn't give down."

JUSTICE FIELD'S POSITION.

Justice Field of the United States Supreme Court, in reply to the open letter of State Senator Cross of California to the President, has conveyed to Mr. Cross a grateful acknowledgment of his kindly reference to himself and the causes which have led to existing political disagreements among the Democrats of California. In the course of this communication Judge Field takes occasion to remark that, with the exception of signing with others the recommendations of a few friends who have personally applied to him, he has not interested himself in the distribution of State patronage, or at least has avoided "all unseemly pressing for appointments." He has no political ambition, and will not participate in the discussions by which the California Democracy are divided. Neither will he wrangle with his mendacious slanders and defamations. As soon as his labors on the bench are ended he will seek repose and time for reflection—possibly some literary recreation—but will be a candidate for no honors at the hands of his Democratic friends.

MR. CONKLING'S INFLUENCE.

Mr. Roscoe Conkling has written a letter to a colored man in Baltimore, who requested him to ask the Secretary of the Treasury to give him an appointment. Mr. Conkling says: "Were I at liberty to make such requests for you and others who in great numbers constantly write me, and could I suppose requests from me would serve any good purpose, I should not refuse. But many reasons, some of which you may know, compel me to re-

A "WESTERN CITIZEN'S" GROWL.

Severe Criticisms of Military Management in Arizona.
Editor Critic:—Newspaper reports state that General Schofield claims that the settlers in Arizona and New Mexico can only be fully protected from murder by savage Apaches when the Indians are entirely under military surveillance, and not allowed to roam at will over a reserve. General Schofield knows or should know what every person in Arizona knows, viz.: That the Apaches have been under military police control for two or three years, when they broke out, prisoners of war in the hands of the forces of General Crook.

These Apaches captured (?) by General Crook in Mexico were not dispersed by the military. The present acting Governor of Arizona, William Van Arnum, said to General Crook, just after the capture of the Apaches, "General Crook, why do you not disarm these murdering savages?" "Why Governor?" responded General Crook, "if we take their arms, they will be left with no arms, and we will be afraid of them." "By G—d, sir, we are afraid of them," was the indignant rejoinder of the Governor.

These Indians were never captured by General Crook, as he claimed at the memorable time when the Administration allowed him to sit as adviser to President Arthur's cabinet. To instruct them how to settle the Apache question. No man can be found in the Indian country who does not very believe that the Indians captured General Crook and that he should have been left to come back, unpunished for theft, slaughter, and rape, with their stolen stock, that they should have been left to come back, unpunished for theft, slaughter, and rape, with their stolen stock.

General Crook brought in with him from Mexico only the women, children and a few men; the rest, as per stipulation made by him when captured by the Apaches, he left behind to gather their stock. The Apaches came in when they pleased, with stock stolen meantime, and used their force to receive their stock. The Apaches came in when they pleased, with stock stolen meantime, and used their force to receive their stock.

It is a little too early yet to predicate speculative operations in gain or any ministerial changes that may take place in England, especially if no rupture of pending negotiations with Russia is probable. A prominent member of the New York Tribune and Express is quoted as saying that this far the circumstances connected with this parliamentary session are comparatively tame. The fall of consols is not greater than it usually is on such occasions, and it would simply be gambling or guesswork for persons on this side to buy gain on the assumption of a largely increased foreign demand.

The Republican says that two parties visited the reservoir yesterday. One was composed of the Health Officer and the police surgeons, and the other of two representatives of the Republican. "The press representatives," says our esteemed contemporary, "were provided with one wide-necked bottle." The Republican men know how to go prepared for any sort of an expedition. "This is the bait the fishermen take."

Lovers of field sports will find much to interest them in the columns of THE CRITIC every day. There are a very large number of persons in Washington who have an interest in the hunt and bat, aquatics, athletics and other many recreations, and they all read THE CRITIC because it contains the news they want.

Fish have been discovered in the Croton water, causing a slight discoloration and a slightly unpleasant taste; but we do not see that the city of New York is all torn up about it. On the contrary the people take it quite as a matter of course at certain seasons of the year and not on an occasion of sensational alarm or a great political issue.

A treaty of peace between France and China was signed at Tientsin yesterday. Can anybody inform us when there was a declaration of war between the two countries. SIR PETER LUNDEN imagines, doubtless, that the dissolution of the Gladstone Cabinet is Sir Peter's vindication. Sir Peter should be in no haste to celebrate.

The Critic devotes special attention to Army and Navy matters, and the officers on duty here unite in pronouncing it one of the best features of the paper.

MR. GLADSTONE goes, but he will return.

PEOPLE IN GENERAL.
EX-SENATOR GWIN of California is at the New York Hotel, New York.

PRESIDENT CALDWELL of Vassar College has resigned on account of a disagreement among the trustees.
IT IS RUMORED that James Russell Lowell will take the place of Dr. Eliot as acting president of Harvard University, and that it was for this reason that he declined the invitation of Oxford.

HON. BOYD WINCHESTER, the new Minister to Switzerland, will sail on Thursday. He is accompanied by his daughter Lillie and Miss Milbrey Waterson, daughter of Hon. Henry Waterson.

NOW THAT GLADSTONE is out of business, we trust that Mr. Edmunds may persuade him to come over to America. This country is something near the grand old man's size.—Philadelphia Press.

AMONG THE IOWA editorial excursionists who called the other day upon the President, was Mr. J. V. Hubbard, who was President Cleveland's school teacher many years ago at Clinton, N. Y.

CAITAIN NATHAN APPLETON, now in New York, will leave for South America July 1, as commercial agent of the Panama Canal Company, and will take with him a large sum of money and return by the Isthmus next fall.

SECRETARY BAYARD and party were weighed in Kansas City the other day with the following result: Mr. Bayard, 202 pounds; Senator Cockrell of Missouri, 260; Senator Vest of Texas, 272; Governor Marmaduke, 170.

MR. WALLACE, the venerable superintendent of the New York police, who could not be coaxed into a resignation by the offer of a handsome pension, has been retired at his own request, and is succeeded by Inspector Wallace.

MR. HANBY of the Philadelphia News denies that he is going West with Governor Bunn or anybody else. He says he intends to stay at home all summer, getting out the "prettiest, prettiest and pinkest" newspaper in the United States.

THE BAZAAR banquet to General Logan will be held at the Eutaw House on some evening not yet designated. Among the invited guests will be James G. Blaine, William M. Everts, Stephen B. Elkins, R. C. Thackeray, and Lewis E. McCombs.
